

Fordham President Addresses Graduates

Alumnus Merits Carroll Medal

Charles J. Bouchet, the oldest living graduate of Loyola College, was awarded the Carroll Medal in recognition of his services to the College as a loyal alumnus, at the graduation ceremonies last Sunday. Mr. Bouchet graduated in 1887.

Mr. Bouchet's life since his college days has been notable. Valedictorian of his class, he studied law after graduation in the office of Charles Bonaparte, Attorney General in Theodore Roosevelt's Cabinet. He received his Law Degree from the University of Maryland Law School in 1891.

Member Of Legislature

He organized the Patapsco Title Company, became associated with the law firm of Benzinger and Caldwell, and was elected to the Maryland Legislature for two terms.

At present he is a member of the Maryland Historical Society, the Baltimore Museum of Art, and he presided over the first meeting in 1914 at the inception of the Retreat work at Manresa-on-the-Severn.

Citation Praises Loyalty

In part, the citation of presentation reads, "Integrity of character and loyalty to his Alma Mater have been so conspicuous through the fifty-seven years since his graduation, that no President of Loyola or Alumni Moderator has failed to receive his complete cooperation, even in endeavors that entailed great sacrifices."

Greyhound Interviews Vice-President Wallace

By Terrence E. Burke

"Your question reminds me of that of another reporter who came to me the other day," said the Vice-President of the United States.

"He wanted me to list for him my ten favorite books. Now, I gave him the books I had enjoyed most, but I reminded him that I didn't like to impose those books on others as being good for them. Just because I like them doesn't mean that someone else will." He paused.

I had asked Mr. Wallace if he had some message he wanted to give the men at college about their place in the post-war world.

The Vice-President was sitting opposite us on one of his office chairs. Leon Pearson, brother of Washington correspondent Drew Pearson who had arranged the interview, was beside me on the couch.

"I don't like to preach to younger men," he continued. "I didn't like to be preached to when I was a boy and I don't like to impose my views on others now."

"But there are some fundamental ideas with which the younger man has to be familiar in order to determine for himself his place in the community."

"Now, I presume that the college man is asking himself, 'How can

Team A-1, Reitz 1-A

Emil G. "Lefty" Reitz, Greyhound basketball mentor, spent the holidays running the basketball team into A-1 condition. Each pep talk centered around maintaining A-1 physical condition for every man on the team.

The cagers had an unhappy revenge recently when the Army determined that "Lefty" was in I-A condition.

V-7's Begin Naval Course

Twelve members of the October graduating class reported to Northwestern University on Jan. 13 to attend Midshipman School under the Navy V-7 Program.

Eleven other members of the same class were graduated yesterday at Notre Dame University and received commissions as Ensigns in the Naval Reserve.

The five remaining V-7 men in the October class have not yet received orders.

The following are now at Northwestern: Daniel H. Bathou, John E. Boerner, Paul R. Connolly, Jr., Joseph D. Douglas, James C. Hunter, Leon Krieger, Joseph G. Kuhn, Jr., Severn Lanier, James M. Libertini, John L. Mullen, Robert J. McElroy, and Edward J. Pazourek.

The five who have not yet received orders are: John P. Fromm, William J. Moran, Edwin T. Steffy, Jr., Maurice F. Treacy, and Paul E. Zacharski.

Students Vote Dave Buchness Council Head

David J. Buchness and Donald Mohler are the new Presidents of Loyola's Student Council and Athletic Association, respectively. Buchness was elected by a close margin over Richard Lerch, Donald Giblin and John Kernan in elections held on December 21. Mohler's closest competitors were Ed McGarry and Tim Parr.

Dave Buchness is the brother of retiring President of the Council, John Buchness. He was inducted into office on January 18 at ceremonies held in the Library. The Reverend Edward B. Bunn, S.J., President of Loyola College, administered the oath, and the Rev. Joseph A. d'Invilliers, Dean of Studies, witnessed the induction.

Mohler States Plans

"Greater interest in intramural sports and bigger attendance at intercollegiate events is our aim," was the comment made by the newly elected Athletic Association head, when interviewed after election. "Here are our plans in a nutshell," Mohler continued. "First, a bigger attendance at basketball games; second, an increase in the membership of the Block L Club and the holding of a number of Block L socials to which the alumni athletes will be invited; third, every student participating in intramural basketball and the wrestling tournament to be held in the near future."

Wants Student Support

"We all know that Loyola College has been hard hit by the war, and that athletics especially have suffered. The A. A. President needs the backing of every student now more than ever. If I don't succeed," "Dutch" attested, "it won't be because I didn't try my best."

Invites Suggestions

"The A. A. President is the middle man between the Athletic Department and the student. Any criticisms or suggestions involving athletics should be brought to him, and he will take the matter up with Lefty and the Student Council."

The new Student Presidents will hold office until next July, when elections again will be held.

Three Seniors Chosen Members Of Who's Who

John M. Buchness, Robert E. Chartrand and Anthony A. Leary were selected to be listed in the next edition of Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities, the Dean has announced.

Buchness served as President of the Student Council for the past semester while Chartrand was Editor of THE GREYHOUND for the same length of time. Leary was President of the Senior class. The three men were graduated last Sunday.

The next edition of Who's Who which will list the seniors' names is to be published following the regular graduation date sometime in June.

37 Receive Diplomas; 93rd Commencement

The ninety-third Commencement exercises of Loyola College graduated 37 Seniors in ceremonies held in the Gymnasium at Evergreen last Sunday. The exercises began at 3:00 p. m.

The traditional Baccalaureate Mass was celebrated by the Very Reverend John J. Lardner, S.S., S. T. D., on the morning of graduation at St. Ignatius' Church. Graduates and their parents and friends attended.

The Baccalaureate sermon was delivered by the Reverend Henri J.

Wiesel, S.J., Rector of Gonzaga High School in Washington and former Rector of Loyola College. The Very Rev. John J. Lardner, Provincial of the Society of St. Sulpice in the United States and President of St. Mary's Seminary, was celebrant.

Charles J. Bouchet, '87, received the Carroll Medal at the ceremonies. (See story Col. 1.)

Thirteen members of the Congregation of St. Francis Xavier received their degrees from the college at the same ceremony. The Xaverian Brothers had completed requirements for their degrees in studies at the college last summer.

Fr. Gannon Guest Speaker

The Reverend Robert I. Gaunon, S.J., M.A. (Cantab.) S. T. D., delivered the address to the graduates. Father Gannon is President of Fordham University.

The Senior Valedictorian was Robert E. Chartrand, retiring GREYHOUND Editor. His topic was "Moral Rearmament". (Author's Note: The text of the Valedictorian's Address appears on page 2 of this issue.)

Majority Of Degrees B. S. 1.

Of the 37 degrees conferred, 13 were of Bachelor of Science, 11 Bachelor of Arts, 10 Bachelor of Philosophy, and three Bachelor of Science in Business Administration. Dr. Edward A. Doehler, '30, Secretary of the Alumni Association and Professor of History at Loyola, was Marshal of the graduates. Charles C. Conlon, President of the Alumni Association, was Grand Marshal.

This graduating class was originally known as the class of '45, and

Alton McCarthy Outlines Great Future For Loyola

Seeing the need of a Catholic college in Baltimore, several members of the Jesuit Order banded together, and in the fall of 1852, founded Loyola College on the site of the present War Memorial Building.

Although the first student body was small, there soon arose the need of a larger building. And in 1855, the school was moved into a newly erected building on the southwest corner of Calvert and Madison Streets. This was the home of Loyola College for the following sixty-six years.

It was in 1921 that the site of the college was again changed—this time to a permanent location, the northeast corner of Charles Street and Cold Spring Lane.

The present Faculty House was at that time the only building on the campus. Until the time of the erection of the Science Building in 1922 it was used both as residence and school. The same year (1922) the Students' Chapel was situated.

In the year 1926, another building was erected on the campus. This was the Alumni Gymnasium, which is capable of holding seven hundred people.

The last building thus far to have been erected is the Library Building. It was built in 1929 and, just as are the Science Building and Gymnasium, is constructed in the collegiate-Gothic style of architecture.

Yes, Loyola College has grown. In its gradual development it has matured from a small school conducted in two rented houses into a

Chartrand Stresses Moral Rearmament

The following is the text of the Valedictory Address entitled "Moral Rearmament" delivered by Robert E. Chartrand at the graduation exercises last Sunday, January 16:

This afternoon Loyola College graduates its fourth class since America's entrance into World War II. The tides of battle have swung back slowly but inevitably from the initial blow until now, the military victory is remotely visible. As Americans, we thank God for the strength which he instilled in us during those black days following Pearl Harbor. As friends and alumni of Loyola, we point with pride to the eight hundred of our brethren who shared, and are sharing, in the waging of the war. But as realists, as men of responsibility, we know that the greater task by far lies beyond the conquest of arms. The hatred, the slaughter, the terror of war, these we know too well. We must prepare ourselves now to understand the roles which we must assume in time of peace. Today, it is important that our soldiery be armed in abundance with guns and tanks and aircraft. Tomorrow, it will be more important that the individual provide himself with weapons more enduring. In the construction of a new world society, the tools which must be at hand are fundamental moral concepts, and you and I, the citizens of that new world society, must rearm ourselves morally if the society is to be lasting and peaceful.

Robert E. Chartrand

Swept along by the argument of the skeptic and the rationalist, man ceased to render homage to God. In every nation in the world, people stopped regular attendance at church. Economic slavery in the factory, in the field as well as in trade and professional life replaced the worship of God. Here at home, we Americans with a government founded and sustained by a trust in God ceased being a God-fearing people. Yes, our people were guilty. The churches which had served as refuge for the founders of our nation were empty. The ideals of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were replaced by a new declaration of independence from God.

Then with less than half of the American people evidencing any concern, much less reverence for God, the United States entered the war. Perhaps the sight of young men marching off to war has sobered some of us. Perhaps the reports of the holiness of that man in the foxhole overseas was even more impressive, perhaps the trust in God which danger instills, will prove man's need of his Creator. The important step toward the attainment of our goal is complete and successful, if we continue to show our trust in God, if we are militantly devoted to our principles. If we are prepared to reestablish the fundamental relation of creature to Creator. Then may we look for peace because we have morally rearmed.

After men had abandoned God, it was but a second and slighter step to abandon fellowman. Today, we seek to annihilate the ideologies which sprang from the individual pride and greed of yesterday. Small wonder that the world's perversity resulted in chaos. We saw the home despoiled when through unnatural financial conditions man's position as head of the family unit all but disappeared. Mothers were separated from their children by the same conditions. Children were denied the equal opportunity which produced the generations of great Americans in the past. We saw a disastrous evolution of the position of the family with divorce laws making a farce of marriage and while planned parenthood was publicly and officially condoned. We saw the elements of force assert

Greyhound Renews Alumni Canvass Listing Early Graduating Classes

By John H. Plunkett

In this issue we continue the list of the alumni of Loyola College.

We are also attempting to list the occupations pursued by the alumni after graduation, and any further education they may have had after leaving Loyola.

Since our sources of information are naturally restricted, we must again solicit the help of anyone who can complement our Loyola alumni list.

themselves upon capital and labor while the entire people suffered. Each of these evil conditions sprang from the pride and greed of our yesterday, and today with our entire nation fighting for freedom, with our youngest citizens dying for broad principle, those same conditions continue to exist. Some drastic alteration must be made not in others but in ourselves. This disruption of civil and domestic society is permitted, if not caused, by our indifference. Our indifference to principle and our indifference to fellowman must be supplanted by a militant activity. Let us dedicate ourselves to the purpose of reestablishing domestic society on a sound basis and civil society on an equitable basis. You and I know mere words will not solve the problems, you and I know that an active concern for fellowman must be an important part of our planning, you and I know that succeeding we shall have removed another threat to the accord of tomorrow. Let this responsibility to fellow-man be our second weapon in our individual moral rearmament.

The activation of duties to God and fellowman throws tremendous responsibility upon the individual. To the individual goes the responsibility for the building of a new society and to the individual goes the responsibility for keeping alive the task once begun. To succeed the program must be nurtured and protected. Viewing such a program objectively, one is staggered by its proportion embracing so much and so many people. The only hope of success lies in careful and diligent education of the individual to assist him in carrying out the plans for rearmament. The education must be two-fold, stemming from the home as well as the classroom. The school, the college, the university will offer the truths of the past, the lessons of thousands of years and an orderly classification of knowledge but the home must supply the individual with those concepts of love, mutual help and self-sacrifice upon which all society is built. Because love, help and sacrifice are largely learned in the home, it is all the more imperative that the stability of domestic society be increased. Realizing the duty which one owes to himself, man will pull himself away from the chasm of chaos, God willing you and I will see and assume our roles. God willing you and I will fit ourselves with this weapon of duty for the sake of future generations, as well as our own.

The degree of success which we attain will depend upon our devotion to our purpose and whatever measure of success is ours will be evident in the resultant change in our civilization. With the lessons of the past in mind, there is reason to believe that should we be as militant in peace as we are in war, this program for individual moral rearmament will achieve the peace for which two modern generations have fought and died. The responsibility is ours—to God, to fellowman, and to self. Please God, may we find the strength!

Council Prexy Reviews Term

By John Buchness
(Retiring President of the Student Council)

When my term as Student Council head began, one thing that was uppermost in my mind was to acquaint the student body with the activities of their Student Council. Knowledge of the requirements for membership and functions of the Council was not general among the students, especially among the freshmen.

To remedy this situation, we immediately took steps to have published in each issue of THE GREYHOUND a report of what had been accomplished in the Student Council meetings up to the time that issue appeared. I feel that this has been successful and hope that it will be continued. This article is a general summary of my term.

Sponsored Cheer Rallies

As the basketball season drew near, we sponsored the cheer rallies in the gymnasium to promote greater interest in the team and athletics in general. The Freshman-Sophomore football game was arranged by the Student Council.

Perhaps our greatest undertaking was the presentation of the Christmas party in the library at Evergreen on the Sunday before Christmas. We were greatly pleased at the large crowd that turned out for the carols.

Athletic Regulations

We prepared and had incorporated into the Council Constitution a definite set of rules and regulations regarding the awarding of athletic letters and awards. Several improvements in conditions in the recreation room and cafeteria facilities were brought about by the Council.

I have left a few recommendations with the new Student Council President as to several other undertakings we did not have time to carry out. I want to urge the Student Body to get to know and to support their new Student Council. Remember, it is your way to get improvements you want accomplished.

Officer Outlines Naval Air Course

Lieutenant Newgord of the Naval Reserve spoke to the freshman class on December 13 on the new requirements for enlistment in the Naval Air Corps.

His talk covered the entire field of training for a V-5 cadet, from physical requirements for enlistment to the final period of pre-combat training.

Requirements for the Naval Air Force have been changed, resulting in the dropping of the V-5 course and the inception of a program known as SV-5.

Pamphlets with additional information were distributed to the freshmen after the talk, and enlistment blanks may be obtained from the office of the Dean.

Math Professor Teaching ASTP

Mr. Frank H. Taylor, S.J., professor of Mathematics and Physical Chemistry, left Loyola on Dec. 11. He is teaching at Georgetown University under the Army Specialized Training Program.

While at Loyola, Mr. Taylor coached the Greyhound harriers and was professor in Public Speaking for a term.

Mr. Walter S. Dawkins has been added to the faculty to take the place of Mr. Taylor. He is teaching Mathematics. Mr. Dawkins is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University and taught at the Capitol Engineering Institute in Washington, D. C. and at public schools in Baltimore.

Burke Visits Washington For Special Interview

ual soul, and I realize that each man is a separate person, and should be left to form his own opinions after adequate study of a subject.

"When the young man has realized that fundamental idea of relating himself to something bigger than himself, then he should further equip himself to know his place in the community by studying great works of the past, especially Greek and Hebrew works.

"The Greeks and Hebrews looked deep into the reasons for things; the Romans did not look as insistently. In a study of the Bible or Plato's Republic one can discover surprising connections with present day life which will help enable him to answer his question 'What should those texts I was referring to," he said.

Mr. Wallace turned the pages slowly and smiled broadly when he interpreted some of the texts in reference to the Pure Food and Drug Act, Inflation, and the Farm Control Bill.

"One lesson I have gotten from the Bible is this, that when a minority is oppressed in any way, it tends as a result of that oppression to develop a certain strength. 'The Stone which the builders rejected has become the corner stone.'

There is a moral to be applied to our present existence in that verse. We have ignored the Russians. As a result of that, they may one day become powerful. It happened that way to the Jews.

"We look down at Latin America be my place in the post-war community?"

"But," said Mr. Pearson, "Aren't these ideas very philosophical?"

"I think they are on the contrary very practical," replied the Vice-President, "since they will help determine the man's place in his community.

"I respect the practical subjects, as science and economics. They are being stressed in colleges now, and rightly so. They develop a logical way of thinking in the individual. But while studying these, the so-called non-practical subjects cannot be excluded."

"Mr. Wallace," I said, "Very few individuals, it seems to me, will study that deeply into the subject."

The Vice-President remarked that he supposed that this was true. "But I think this: that when a man dies, he will want the satisfaction of realizing that during his lifetime he has used the powers God gave him to their fullest extent.

"If you're going to play football, or basketball, or tennis, play it with all your power. If you're going to study your place in the community, study it and follow it through with all of your power."

Mr. Wallace remarked that there were difficulties to be met, but that one of the purposes of college was to overcome that slackness, and that that was the way eventually to arrive at the answer to the college man's question, 'What is my best place in the community?'

We rose to go, but the Vice-President waved us back into our seats. Rising he took a Bible from a nearby shelf. "I'll read you some of and China, and as a result they may become important." He closed the Bible.

"That's my advice. But I refuse to preach. However, if the young man remembers that fundamental idea that he is a part of something bigger than himself, then if he studies the past for an insight into the future, he will be able to figure out his own answer to the question, 'How can I best serve my community after the war?'

We rose to leave, and the Vice-President followed us to the door. The interview had lasted 30 minutes.

The office of the Vice-President of the United States is on the street floor of the Senate Office Building. It is a good two blocks from the Senate wing of the Capitol building, but only a half minute's ride by the handy private subway.

While Mr. Pearson was showing me around the press galleries of the Senate, I asked him several questions about his well-known brother, whom I had met that morning, and their work together.

"Drew has been doing the Washington Merry-Go-Round column for 11 years," he said. "Did you notice that rickety old typewriter in his office? His father gave that to him in 1918. It is an old double-shift type 'portable' Corona. Drew still writes his column on it every day, although he has two secretaries.

"He used to be Washington correspondent for your Baltimore Sun. Since leaving the Sun, he has published several books about Washington, two of them named after his column."

Burke Chosen Editor-in-Chief Of Greyhound

Terrence E. Burke is the new Editor-in-Chief of THE GREYHOUND, the Reverend Paul J. Gibbons, S.J. announced at the annual GREYHOUND banquet. Father Gibbons, Moderator of THE GREYHOUND, will announce the remainder of the staff changes this afternoon.

The guest of honor at the banquet was Mr. Francis F. Beirne, author of the popular column "Mr. Billop", a humorous satire on human experience which appears daily in The Evening Sun. For the benefit of the staff Mr. Beirne reminisced through his years in journalism. He stressed the opportunities in journalism for the college student after the war. During an account of his own journalistic career he mentioned the work of Weston Emmart, GREYHOUND staff cartoonist, as outstanding.

At the banquet, given in honor of the members of the staff in the graduating class, Fr. Gibbons awarded the coveted GREYHOUND pins. These pins are only given to those senior staff members who have done outstanding and continuous work for the paper. Undergraduates who merited them were awarded work awards. The Very Reverend Edward B. Bunn, S.J. addressed the staff and again emphasized the importance of continuing the work on THE GREYHOUND, despite the added drawbacks of an accelerated course. Some twenty-seven members in attendance made this the largest GREYHOUND banquet in years.

ALUMNI DOINGS

By Edward A. Doepler, '30

Banquet

Last year's Alumni Banquet proved beyond all doubt that it is still possible to have this traditional Alumni activity, war or no war. Many members are in service; war-time occupations will prevent others from attending; but there are still in and near Baltimore a sufficient number of members of the Association to keep alive the spirit of Loyola and continue to carry on the tradition that will be looked forward to by all our members in the happy days after victory.

The 1944 banquet will be held on February 21, the eve of Washington's Birthday. The Chairman has been chosen and will announce the necessary details in due time through the columns of THE GREYHOUND.

In the meantime, keep the date open, Monday, February 21, 1944.

Graduation

Alumni Doings salutes the oldest living Alumnus, Charles Bouchet, on the occasion of the award of the Carroll Medal at the recent graduation. To one who has been following the activities of Loyola College, Mr. Bouchet is a familiar figure. No Alumni function is complete without the presence of this truly distinguished member. The Association congratulates him, and joins with the administration of the College in wishing him well. To the membership of the Alumni, Mr. Bouchet will always be an inspiration to increased service and loyalty to Loyola.

Au Revoir

After a six month tenure the Class of 1944 moves on to be replaced. New men and new ideas, so vital to a growing organization, are thus introduced into the bloodstream of the publication assuring the readers of a continuity of appeal through variety. Each year from the foundation of THE GREYHOUND has produced some alterations, some improvements together with countless experiments in format and technique. The new men who assume responsibility have evidenced a background for the further evolution of the paper they are called upon to edit and write. The members of the class of 1944 leaving the staff unhesitatingly guarantee a period of prodigious growth in the future.

The place occupied by THE GREYHOUND on the campus has been won through the efforts of many individuals. The retiring staff knows from personal experience the cooperation which it received from the administration of the college. That spirit of cooperation so willingly proffered was instrumental in any improvement of factual news accounts issuing from THE GREYHOUND. The same spirit was imitated throughout the staff, both underclassmen and seniors, to produce this link with the student body, the alumni and friends of Loyola.

In every organization there must be a coordinating force. In other schools and in the cases of other similar publications, that force might be merely a common interest in journalism. It might be the need of supplying an insight into the institution which the publication represents. Another consideration might be the chronicling of events for the sake of rendering a permanent record. Perhaps the unifying force is a person of insight, conviction, boundless energy and ingenuity. The force may be an active concern that persons interested in the institution should have an accurate and interesting knowledge of current activity. At Loyola, THE GREYHOUND sets up as its ideal a combination of these elements. It is only fair that the retiring staff should point to one phase of that element which has remained in the background. We refer to the person best fitting the description given, the Reverend Paul J. Gibbons, S.J., Moderator of THE GREYHOUND. Each member of the staff has come to know him as a man of God bestowed with the rarest qualities. The departing seniors will remember him as friend and confidant, as a man of determination and ingenuity with all the zeal of the combined staff. Through him the seniors learned that THE GREYHOUND too was done Ad Majorem Dei Gloriam.

It remains to bid good fortune to our successors and silently steal away. With each succeeding semester since the opening of the war, activities outside the academic sphere have been hard hit. The new staff should be heartened by the fact that of all activities the newspaper alone has gained over fifty per centum of total active membership. The administration and Father Gibbons look to the new staff for a continuance of improvement of THE GREYHOUND together with what it has come to mean. Only the future will tell of the new staff's success or failure, but if they have learned their lessons well as their positions of trust indicate, they can not fail. In any service the seniors stand ready to assist in whatever measure possible.

Finally, the adieu must be uttered according to custom by the retiring staff. Let us say simply the spirit evidenced by the college in its entirety will remain an integral part of the lives which we seniors lead in the future whether on the battleground or elsewhere. God bless us everyone.

The Reader's Right

To the Editor of THE GREYHOUND:
Sir:

A perusal of the student attendance files at Loyola College will fail to reveal my name. But how I wish that I were an alumnus graduated with the class of '43, graduated with my former Loyola High School classmates.

I have before me the October 8 issue of THE GREYHOUND sent me by this year's valedictorian, Jack Steffy, a very good friend of mine. Here in Italy literature is very scarce, so you can imagine how thoroughly I read and enjoy such an excellent paper. Keep producing fine material like THE GREYHOUND, and in that way you help keep Loyola a living, flourishing name. Though I'm not a Loyola College alumnus, somehow, someday, I hope to earn the title.

Best wishes and carry on.

Sincerely,

Senior Review by Don Freiert

The history of the class of January 1944 has been completed. The final page was written last Sunday when thirty-seven of the original class of one hundred thirty-six received their degrees.

The history began in September 1941. At this time the class of 1944 was initiated into the spirit of Loyola. It was then that the freshmen began to assert themselves as leaders at Evergreen. The frosh became members of all the extracurricular activities. They took a front seat on the athletic teams and other organizations. It was through the efforts of an all freshman infield that the baseball team won the Mason-Dixon championship.

The second chapter opened in September of 1942. As sophomores, the class of 1944 showed that they had the ability to go ahead.

Several of the outstanding sophs were appointed to the editorial staff of the GREYHOUND, and under the leadership of Editor Harold Molz, the GREYHOUND Scholarship Fund was begun. Again with the support of the sophomores, the Greyhounds won the Mason-Dixon basketball championship. It was also during this year that the Hounds captured the M-D baseball diadem. This year found the class of '44 contributing in no small degree to the arming of our country. Almost half the class enlisted in the Navy and Marine Reserve, while others were drafted into the Army.

The final chapter opened and closed within the short space of six months. The new staff under the leadership of its Editor and Moderator added an extra-curricular activity to the college when the Greyhound Press Club was formed.

SWINGOLOGY

By Richard S. Clark '44

Boogie woogie, which has finally attained its proper place in American music, is one of the oldest of the blues forms. The art of boogie woogie probably started in the last century when the insistent bass figures were playing on the old style banjo to the accompaniment of the simplest and most direct type of vocal blues shouting.

A dynamic tonal art, boogie woogie is difficult to define but once heard it is easily recognizable again. Aside from its immense vitality its most striking characteristic is the rapid bass rhythm usually of a jerky, rolling nature which produces tremendous drive and swing. Indicative of its unique development, the boogie woogie piano is treated solely as a percussion instrument.

An analysis of the musical elements of boogie woogie style adds little to an understanding of its magic. Rhythmically more simple than some types of African music it is still much more complex than the conventional jazz piano style. The rapid patterns of the left hand are often set against the ever-changing rhythms of the right hand, causing a series of most effective cross rhythms.

Although boogie woogie pianists are accustomed to improvising for incredibly long periods of time without let-up, this does not exclude formal patterns. Meade Lux Lewis may be cited as a pianist who can improvise for thirty or forty minutes on Honky Tonky Train Blues, maintaining suspense and constantly adding new structural elements.

Meade Lux Lewis was born in Louisville, Kentucky, in 1905, his family moving to Chicago when he was still very young. His father was a Pullman porter and for a time the family lived near the railroad yards. Trains roaring by gave him many of the ideas used so effectively in Honky Tonk Train Blues. Lewis, a versatile creator whose numerous tunes have been recorded on nine different labels, is considered the most imaginative of the boogie woogie pianists.

Albert Ammons is a year younger than Meade Lux. For a while Ammons and Pine Top Smith (another great figure of boogie woogie piano) lived in the same house and Albert, Pine Top, and Meade Lux got together for sessions of boogie woogie. Ammons and Lewis worked for the Silver Taxicab Company during the 1920's, and played boogie woogie on the side. Two records showing the skills of Ammons and Smith on the keyboard are Shout for Joy and Pine Top's Boogie Woogie.

Charles Davenport, familiarly known as Cow Cow, was born in 1894 in Anniston, Alabama. With a family of eight to support, his parents frowned on such an uncertain calling as music and packed Cow Cow off to theological school where he was promptly expelled for ragging a march at a church social. While still in his teens he played piano and sang songs in Birmingham and around the mining sections of the state, working in low-class cabarets or back rooms. He is best known for the train piece that gave him his nickname, Cow Cow Blues.

Because of lack of space I omitted such figures as Pete Johnson, Jimmy Yancey, Hersal Thomas, Lemuel Fowler, Cripple Clarence Lofton, and Joe Turner. All of these men have done much for boogie woogie and its development.

Reviewer's note: All books reviewed in this column can be obtained in the college library.

Education at the Crossroads by Jacques Maritain. Modern education has been the subject of much discussion for quite some time now. Naturally there is much to be said for and against the present system, and there has been a need for a concise yet complete analysis of the problem for a long time. We now have such an analysis in Mr. Maritain's new book. In this short work, which is a compilation of a series of lectures delivered at Yale University, the author first considers the aims of education. From this outline he progresses to the study of the dynamics of education and shows how the "humanities" and liberal education in general can be used to fulfill this program of education. The last part of this study is concerned with the "trials of present day education" and the problems that will confront educators the world over after the present war has ended.

Paris Underground by Etta Shiber. As an American citizen residing in Paris, the authoress had certain immunities under the German protectorate before America entered the present struggle. These immunities were of great assistance to her and to Kitty Beaurepos, an English friend who had married a Frenchman. Before the outbreak of war, the two had shared an apartment in Paris. When the Germans invaded Paris the two friends attempted to leave the city for a safer city, far from the Nazis. However, before Mrs. Shiber and her friend had driven even a few miles from Paris, they were forced to turn back by the oncoming Germans. An accidental meeting with an English pilot, whom the two women help to escape from France, was the start of a smuggling ring of which Mrs. Shiber became a very active member. Their system of smuggling English soldiers out of occupied France was an intricate one and kept the Gestapo guessing until over one hundred and fifty men had left the country illegally.

The Battle Is The Pay-Off by Ralph Ingersoll. Combining the knowledge of an officer of our Army Engineer Corps with the experience of an expert journalist, Captain Ingersoll has produced a long needed analysis of our Army's training methods. The planning of the book is a most practical one. The author, former editor of PM, introduces the reader to warfare by describing the battles of El Guettar. He then proceeds to show that "battle is organized disaster", and what training should be given the soldier to protect himself in this disaster and to win the battle.

Leap year has again come to Loyola. As a result we have this little pageant:

Scene 1) Three Loyola men were badly mangled as a result of jumping from a speeding No. 11 car to escape from the clutching hands of eager Notre Dame girls.

Scene 2) Two Notre Dame girls fall off at same time.

Scene 3) Two Notre Dame girls chase three Loyola men up Saint Paul St.

Once there was an Irishman named Sullivan who had just arrived in New York. Soon after his arrival he found $245. He decided to celebrate, and took the street car downtown. He rode along for a few blocks when the conductor called out, "Pearl." A woman arose and got off the car. After a few more blocks the conductor called out, "Myrtle," and another woman got off. Finally, the conductor called, "Sullivan," whereupon Sullivan got off the car. He stood on the corner and a woman came along and asked, "Is this Sullivan?" When told that it was, she said that she was looking for 245. Without a word, Sullivan handed her the money.

Running With The Hounds

By Harry Slaughter

Here we are again, fellows. It looks like our so-called "fine High School squad" picked up a little pep or added ability during that three week lay-off. The boys broke into 1944 letting out with what turned out to be some really hot basketball. Jim Lacy is back in the groove again after that hectic Bainbridge game before Christmas. The American U. and Marshall games that same week took just about all the Hounds had. They were all dead tired before they walked on the court with the sailors. Three tough teams in one week were a little more than they could take. Nevertheless they took it on their feet. They were in there fighting just as hard as ever, and the Bainbridge boys had to work for every point they scored.

Tom Gisriel, I believe, has shown more improvement since the season opener than any one of the other nine. Possibly this is because he wasn't "in there" in the first few games but he really poured it on in that Gallaudet game and hasn't let up since.

Jim Lacy, still high scorer of the Mason-Dixon conference has consistently played the brand of ball that is tops. He has already proven to be one of the best freshmen courtmen to enter Loyola. Ed McGarry has picked up a lot of touch since last season and is moving the ball around like a veteran. Gene O'Connor with his cool, constant drive has continued to hold the team together. Dutch Mohler has shown improvement on the outside shot and is weaving the ball in a little more. Bill Schanberger was knocked out by a short illness causing him to miss two games. This affected his playing ability some, but he has shown that he has a head for basketball. Bill is a team man and merits watching—he is destined to go places in the basketball world. Bill Davis, a little shy early in the season is improving steadily and seems to be settling down a little and getting the hang of things. Both Cohen and Cammarata have been moving the ball around, playing good basketball. Neither have done excessive scoring but experience will aid their improvement. Cole is in there fighting whenever he gets the chance.

So far the Greyhounds have been able to meet Mason-Dixon competition and come out on top. The outside teams have shown a little too much experience for our freshmen. Tomorrow night's game will be the real test. Mount Saint Mary's has some first-class courtmen as Navy trainees. However some of our own Hounds also are first-class basketballers, lacking only in experience. There is always a chance that they will pick tomorrow night to prove themselves. The encounter with the Mounties will be the first home game at Evergreen since the Haverford scrap on January 12. The home men are going to have the entire student body behind them in the grandstand. Our vocal cords have had a whole week's rest and we are going to show the boys from Emmitsburg that we have real faith in our team—the team we know won't let us down.

It is very seldom that the Sports Column of THE GREYHOUND undertakes to promote a non-athletic movement. When it does you can be sure it is of utmost importance. Lefty Reitz claims that Loyola school spirit isn't what it should be. Since Lefty has no other way of expressing his views except through these pages I have taken this time and space to explain what he calls the "Speak Easy" system. Lefty pointed out to me that a stranger on the campus would think that Loyola men are anti-social. As a matter of fact we not only don't speak to visitors, very few of us toss a "Hi there" to one another. "School spirit", says Lefty, "is dependent upon the union between students". Loyola is small—less than two hundred strong. But we can be just as big as the largest if we get together and get to know each other. And how can we get together and feel that we are just one big happy family? The pass word is "Hi there". If you don't know a man's name just sing out with "Hi George" when you meet him. If his name isn't George, and it most likely won't be, he will tell you his real name—thus you have a new friend and you are beginning to like the place a whole lot more already. So get into the speak easy habit and you will find that you will like Loyola better if you know some of the men you didn't go to High School with. Well—maybe I didn't say "Hi George" when I met you on the campus the other day. I was a stately Senior and you were a lowly underclassman.—You were snubbed-bub. . . . So long fellows. It's been nice knowing you and it has been a privilege to run with the Hounds. I am still behind the Green and Gray and their coach Lefty Reitz—just like all the rest of the loyal alumni.

Hounds Swamp Bisons, 55-25; Lacy Scores 14

The Greyhounds started the scoring early to gain the lead and in the second period stepped up their basketmaking speed to a dizzy pace to rout the Gallaudet cagers, 55-25.

The second Mason-Dixon conference victory for the Hounds was witnessed by approximately 500 fans. Loyola hit its stride in the second half after leaving the court with a 28-19 advantage. The Green and Gray defense also tightened in the second period allowing last season's title holders to score only 6 points in the final 20 minutes.

Jim Lacy again led the scoring, one point up on Tom Gisriel's 13. Gisriel really put on a surprise performance in the second period.

Gallaudet made most of their points on outside shots, which failed to click in the second half of the game. Don Padden held the team together throughout the entire encounter.

Basketball, Wrestling Top Intramural Card

Intramural basketball and wrestling began almost as soon as the Christmas holiday season was ended. The students on their return from their holiday encountered a final examination and then were faced with a choice as to which sport they preferred to play. If they chose basketball they could assemble their own teams. Those men on the Varsity squad were not eligible to play on the intramural teams but the members of the B squad were permitted to play. The only thing they could not do was to play as an individual team. They had to be scattered throughout all the intramural basketball teams. These basketball games are being held during the students lunch hour, or after school, so as not to interfere with the Physical Training period.

Now we turn to the other sport, that of wrestling. This competitive sport was begun at the same time as basketball. The wrestling teams were divided into classes according to their weights. The matches were so arranged that a student would wrestle with every fellow in his class. To make the matches more interesting a percentage is being kept for each man. It will be on much the same basis as the percentages taken for the basketball teams. The man having the highest percentage will be the winner in his division.

These two sports, basketball and wrestling, will start the intramurals rolling for the rest of the year. Together with these, and physical training, the students will really be found in tiptop shape. The success of these sports will depend upon the students themselves and since they are compulsory there is no doubt of their success.

A. A. President's Message To Students

Dear Fellows,

You, the Student Body put me in office as President of the Loyola Athletic Association. Certainly you expect me to do my duty, but in order for me to accomplish this I must have your cooperation. You can see from the success and failure of the Athletic Association in the past that the fate of the organization lies, not in the hands of the President but in those of the student body. Don't get me wrong—I know I have my part to do and I am going to do it.

There are many in the college who are eligible for membership in the Block L Club. There is no reason whatsoever why all who are qualified do not belong to this organization. Perhaps you don't know whether you should be a member of the club. In that case see Lefty Reitz or myself and we can put you straight. The members of the basketball squad can join now, as well as those who ran cross-country in the fall.

Let's build the Block L up now. It will more than likely be the last chance for the duration to make it a success. A strong Athletic Association can do a lot for Loyola, but if we don't get started now it may be too late.

Another thing fellows: you've got to get behind the basketball squad. If you want a winning team, it is going to be your winning team. You are going to be the ones that come to the games and root for your team. If you don't you will be letting your team down; you will be letting your hard-working coach down; you will be letting your college down; and in the long run you will be letting yourself down. Get wise, men—it's your team not mine; it's your duty to see that they get a break.

If any of you have ideas that might help, new cheers or something of that sort, don't hesitate to see Lefty or Dave Buchness or myself about it.

That about all I have to say fellows—it's our team and our school, so let's go and give it all we have.

Sincerely,

Dutch Mohler

Loyola B Squad Season Record

Loyola B squad seems to be in a rut this year. Or perhaps it would be better to say they are just not quite in the groove.

In the initial game of the season they fought a close, hard-fought battle with the Towson Catholic squad. Cohen with seven points and Cammarata with six were high scorers for the Green team in the 32 to 28 encounter. Thaler, Cashen and Haslbeck, each scored four points in the opening game.

They met the Senior All-Stars, a group composed mostly of the remnants of last year's Lonely Hearts and Bushmaster intramural squads, for the second encounter. Paul Sowa and Bill Metzbowler who were on the B squad last season also played for the all-stars. The Seniors proved by their 34-24 victory that they had had more experience and could move the ball around just a little better than the younger squad. However, the game was by no means a walkover. The Green team, led by Bill Hodges with

1943 Sports Roundup

Loyola Tankmen Take Third Middle Atlantic Title

Loyola, with the Steingass brothers, Bruz Dailey, Don Connor and Leon Greenbaum were once more the most successful of the winter teams, losing only one meet, that to a strong University of Delaware team. This was the only defeat that the team has suffered in three years.

Graduate Signs With Orioles

Franny Mueller, Loyola's handy man of sports, began training with the Baltimore Orioles of the International Baseball League on March 17, having signed with the Thomas men until called into active service by the Navy.

Delaware Bows 61-42 To Hound Courtmen

One of the major factors in the Greyhound victory was their superiority on rebounds, with Franny Bock and Jim Nonss bearing the greater part of the burden. Barney Goldberg was a big gun on the attack with a total of 23 points for the game.

Simmons Takes Pole Vault

Climaxing a very successful season, Loyola's track squad placed third in the annual Mason-Dixon Championships. The Greyhounds tallied 33½ points to finish on the heels of Johns Hopkins and Catholic University. The surprise of the meet was Bob Simmons of Loyola, who won the Pole Vault crown. Larry Schmitt and Dick Clark were the high-scorers for the Green and Gray, each scoring 7 points.

Stickmen Stop Swarthmore

With determination born of desperation the Greyhound stickmen spilled a scrappy Swarthmore ten, 4-3, at Evergreen. Bobby McElroy continued his brilliant brand of playing with all four goals.

Coast Guard Sinks Hounds

In the initial game of the season the Hounds went down in defeat, as the Coast Guard quint took the laurels in a 46-32 victory. However, the Cutters by no means walked away with the Green team as was expected. Both teams warmed up slowly, first one scoring and then the other until the score stood 17 to 16 with only four minutes remaining in the first period. In those remaining minutes the Curtis Bay men managed to widen their margin to five points, leaving the court with a 25-20 count.

With Irwin Schneider leading the Guardsmen, they kept out in front and increased their lead in the final half of the game. The Hounds fought hard and showed real signs of improvement as the game progressed. Jim Lacy led the Greyhounds at the scoring post, followed by Gene O'Connor, Tom Gisriel, Ed McGarry and Dutch Mohler who were also laying up a few. They displayed real form in their various attacks, outside shots, and in their ability to maneuver the ball around the court. If this brand of basketball is kept up, the Hounds will surely wind up the season in the upper brackets.

Krieger Cops Championship In M-D Meet

Leon Krieger was a runner-up in the South Atlantic Wrestling Tournament, defeating some of the best men on the Eastern sea-board. He also took the Mason-Dixon Crown in his weight class.

Junior Jerks Trim Manglers

In a fast, hard fought game the Junior Jerks upset the dope by conquering the highly touted Mangler five 10-6.

Lonely Hearts Win Intramural Championship

The Lonely Hearts, led by Tony Leary with 16 points, defeated the Junior Jerks by a score of 33-20. Leary was supported by Friert and Schwalenberg, each with 5 points, Fay with 4, and Hutson tallying 3.

B Squad Defeats Maryland School of Pharmacy

Lanky Bernie Saltysiak and Ed McGarry supplied a major portion of the scoring punch, with Scrivener, Sowa and Carmody also playing an important part in the team's success.

Loyola Trims Green and Gold

The Green and Gray blanked the Western Maryland squad, 6-0, sweeping the four individual matches and both best ball points. John Love, Bill Strausbaugh, Bernie Saltysiak and Bill Metzbowler performed for the Hounds.

Hounds Take Conference Opener

The Greyhounds took their first Mason-Dixon Conference game with a 51-37 lead on the Bridgewater Eagles. Jim Lacy set the pace, looping in 11 field goals in twenty attempts. Tom Gisriel took second honors making good 5 shots out of nine.

Marshall Whips Green and Gray

Loyola seems to be strictly a Mason-Dixon Conference team this season. The encounter with Marshall College, of Huntington, W. Va., marked the Hounds third straight non-conference loss. The Marshall quint crushed the Greyhounds in a fast-moving second half at Evergreen to win, 55 to 37.

Loyola Takes 14-7 Lead

In the first ten minutes of the game it seemed that the Hounds were on the way to defeat the Marshall five. Largely through the shooting of Jim Lacy, Loyola forward, the Hounds built up a lead of 14 to 7. At Henderson's signal, his team formed a defense which put the Greyhounds up against the wall. Loyola found the 2-3 zone defense too great a problem and often lost the ball trying to get past the front line in mid-court. Most of these steals were converted into points by the fast-breaking Marshall team.

At half time the score stood at 20 to 19 giving the Loyola squad a one point advantage. Soon after the beginning of the fast-moving second period the visitors took the lead and were there to stay throughout the rest of the game.

Wildcats Trim Loyola Cagers

The Hounds were overmatched by the big wildcat squad from Villanova. The home team made the most of every opportunity and in the third period threatened to overtake the Pennsylvania five.

The Wildcats lacked the smoothness a team with such experience should have had. They outranged the Greyhounds in height and weight, and took most of the rebounds.

Even though the Hounds were on the short end of the 51-35 score, freshman forward Jim Lacy split the cords with 14 points to be high-scorer of the game. Both Ed McGarry and Gene O'Connor did their share of the scoring with six points each to their credit. McGarry played much better basketball than he did in the previous game with Bridgewater.

The Evergreen boys as usual were by no means falling down on the job. It was a hard fought game and they battled all the way.

Loyola B Squad Season Record

(Continued from Page 6, Col. 5) ten points, dropped a few through the net to bring their total to twenty-four for the game. Nor was the margin as wide throughout the game as it was at the final whistle. Paul Sowa of the All-Stars broke loose in the last few minutes of the game to pour three field goals through the hoops to add six points to the Senior's lead.

In the third game of the season, with a quint from the Navy Recruiting center, the young Hounds again went down in defeat. The Navy squad played a fast game and sank two for every one of the B squad's baskets. Cohen was high scorer for the Green team with six points in the 36-18 encounter.

The Calvert Hall varsity also proved to be a little too strong for the B squad five. They played a hard-fought game only to come out on the short end of the 45-24 match. Cohen and Cammarata were top scorers for the Green and Gray with nine and seven points respectively.

When the B squad again met the proud Senior All-Stars they were out for revenge. The game was nip and tuck all the way through. Both teams fought for all they were worth, but the Green team turned the tables on the Seniors to take the game, 25-21.

The second victory of the B squad came at the expense of the Royal Athletic Club from Highlandtown. Cohen and Hodges were again high men of the Green and Gray quint, each with six points. The young Hounds outplayed the Royal A. C. five throughout the game and piled up twenty six points to their opponents' seventeen.

The B squad really stepped out of their class when they took on the Poly Varsity at Evergreen. The North Ave. squad played excellent basketball and the Hounds were "outdone" all the way around. Thaler and Cammarata however managed to ring up six and five points respectively to be high scorers for the game.

Greyhounds Clip Eagles, 33-26

Loyola won its third straight conference victory in the Mason-Dixon conference race by toppling the American University quint 33-26.

Although the American squad was boosted by Navy trainees, the Greyhounds through their superior condition were able to drive ahead in the last seven minutes of the game after the score was tied at 26.

The Eagles led through the major part of the first period and continued to scramble to the front through the second session until Gene O'Connor stole the ball and scored a layup that put the Hounds on top 20 to 19 with 8 seconds left in the first half.

The third quarter saw a lot of scrap and little scoring. Loyola expanded the lead to 24-21 in the first 4 minutes, and in the six minutes to follow neither team scored. Both tried hard but the ball refused to drop. Finally Nelson of the Washington team found the range and the Greyhounds entered the final quarter with but a one point lead.

In the fourth period Bill Davis and Jim Lacy worked the corner for a field goal against the Eagle's zone defense. Miller of the University team tossed a charity throw, and Latimer hoisted a field goal from the outside to even things up at 26-all.

Here the Hounds started to work. Lacy dropped one on a point shot, following a rebound recovery and added two free throws to bring his total for the night to 17 points.

American deserted the zone for a man-for-man set-up when Loyola began a fore-court freeze, but to no avail.

LOYOLA QUINTET LOSES TO BAINBRIDGE FIVE

Loyola again went down by the efforts of another strong service team. The Bainbridge Commodores won their seventh game by defeating the Greyhounds in a 62-34 encounter at Evergreen.

McGarry Leads

Ed McGarry was high-point man for the Greyhounds despite the fact that he was physically under par. He sank five out of fifteen from the floor, most of them from the outside. Jim Lacy, usually high man for the Hounds was guarded by Al Brightman, former Southern California cager, who limited him to seven points for the game.

With the score at the beginning of the second period standing at 34 to 11 and the Commodores on top, the Hounds battled as if on even terms with their opponents. In the opening four minutes they rang up six points to their total and kept Bainbridge from scoring. In the following sixteen minutes the Navy men continued to pour the ball through the hoop, but Loyola did a little pouring into its own net and was in no way disgraced in losing its fourth non-conference match to so strong an opponent.

college comprising five major buildings and seventeen and one half acres of campus.

Plans which call for the erection of three new buildings and the readjustment of most of the College's departments have been formulated. Foremost among these is the plan for the construction of a Residence Hall adjoining the Science Building. It will be equipped with facilities for at least one hundred boarding students.

Another addition to the campus buildings will be the Administration Building. It will contain a cafeteria, and auditorium — both with capacities of seven hundred people. Also in this building will be found several classrooms and the administrative offices.

The final building of the group will be a permanent chapel. All are to be designed in the collegiate-Gothic style.

STARS-IN-STRIPES

Barney Goldberg was perhaps one of the best basketball players ever developed at Loyola. This is not only the opinion of his coach and team-mates but also of many of the opposing coaches. He graduated from Loyola in January, 1943. Soon after graduation he was sent to Parris Island, South Carolina, where he received training in the Marine Corps. After attaining his commission he was married, on June 26, to Miss Elaine Pitsinger of Baltimore.

Barney started his sports career at St. Martin's where he learned to play basketball. While at St. Martin's he was on a team winning national honors. At Calvert Hall he began his scholastic football and basketball record. Although he was a varsity football man his real success came in basketball.

At Loyola Barney had many accomplishments. His main interest, needless to say, was basketball, playing varsity all four years. His fourth year was short-lived however, because of graduation under the accelerated plan. Besides basketball, he was also active in soccer, track and intramurals. On the soccer team he played on the line as right wing man and reaped his share of scoring honors. In his Junior year Barney began running half-mile for the track team. In his senior year he captained the "Fighting Irish" football team which took the league play, only to he defeated by the strong "Bushmaster" team in the playoffs.

Lieut. Bernard F. Goldberg,
U. S. M. C. R.

However, he didn't win all his recognition in athletics. He was an honor student and a member of the Accounting and International Relations Clubs. Barney Goldberg recently was ordered to active service overseas. He will be remembered at Loyola as a scholar, a gentleman and a real basketball player.

Players' Outlook...

Jimmy Lacy—"The team has a long way to go before we can compete with the top-notch teams, but we ought to do O. K. against most of the conference teams."

Tom Gisriel—"If we have team work we will win the majority of the games."

Ed McGarry—"Of course Lefty doesn't have as many experienced players as he has had in many previous years, but I believe, even with the material we have, we will have as good a season as in past years."

Dutch Mohler—"If the school gets behind us there is no reason why the team won't win the majority of the games. Lefty's trying hard to develop us and the going is tough. We will try our best, I'm sure."

Sal Cammarata—"Due to some inexperience on the team, this year, too much cannot be expected at first. However, with Lefty's good coaching and with school spirit, I'm certain the squad will come out near the top."

Jerry Cohen—"Lefty has scheduled as many games as he has been able to, and we will have our work cut out for us. Although we are inexperienced on the whole, Lefty may work out a winning combination from the material on hand."

Neil Cole—"Seeing the general set-up of the conference, this season, Loyola's spirit should be high, and we should end up near the top. The team on the whole seems to have developed well and all are aiming for a good season."
